

Project Manager for GreenMobility's International Expansion

GreenMobility is a Danish-based car sharing company with purely EV's, offering a simple, convenient and affordable service to cater for the urban mobility. The company and organization are on a fast growth path in rolling out its service to European cities through strong partnerships. We believe in local partners, who invest in and operate the local GreenMobility business as a franchisee. The European – and international – cities are demanding shared services with a clear preference for EV's and GreenMobility has the ideal solution. We are seeing a strong interest from partners around Europe and plan for the next cities to open soon.

Planning and deploying a car sharing service requires steady project planning, even with all our knowledge, systems, and manuals, and our prime task is to assist and support our partners in doing this and reaching a successful launch. In order to do that, we are looking to hire a Project Manager, who is ready to take on this challenge.

You come with fantastic coordinating & facilitating skills and know what it means to keep track of lots of tasks, ideas and loose ends. Even with several projects running in parallel, you know how to make sure they all come together, so we are ready for launch. You know the importance of vigorous follow-up and ongoing alignment with a host of stakeholders spanning our partners, municipalities, suppliers and local vendors, and of course you thrive on being in the midst of the process.

You most likely have a position as Project Coordinator today, or experience as such and have ideally worked across countries and cultures. You have a strong ambition to grow into the role as Project Manager, and you have results showing you are ready to step up. Having experience working with franchise or partnerships will be an advantage, as will experience with SaaS and Mobility services. As GreenMobility work across many countries, a high proficiency in business English is required, and any additional languages would be welcomed.

As a person you are open and proactive, you are patient but still assertive. You know when to listen and when to push. You are motivated by having many to-do's and an extensive project plan that you deliver on, on time.

Join our team of young fast moving colleagues and be part of our ambition to introduce GreenMobility car sharing in European cities. We have set a clear goal of being in 20 cities by 2021, so the target is set. See partner.greenmobility.com for more information.

Motivated to join our team? - please send us your application to job@greenmobility.com, with "Project Manager" as subject, as soon as possible. We look forward to hearing from you.
